

dominance games go on until the pecking order is established all the way down the line. And don't think it stops there! When people come into the picture and the horse has gotten past his innate fears, he will play these same dominance games with his human.

Understanding horse psychology is a big key to becoming skillful. When you understand that survival, comfort and play are important to a horse (and in that order), and you learn to read his body language you have the basic building blocks of communication.

Understanding his games and his needs and then playing those games with him helps you become his alpha, his leader.

Learning these things about a horse develops a level of savvy in you that is rare in the horse world, but a savvy that's unmistakable in students of Parelli Natural Horse-Man-Ship.

Pat Parelli, the teacher

Pat Parelli is internationally renowned as one of the world's most provocative and most respected thinkers and teachers of Natural Horsemanship.

His teaching style is magnetic, motivational and effective. In fact, his teachings are in such demand that he has groomed Parelli Instructors to teach more of the Level 1 Partnership and Level 2 Harmony clinics while he begins to concentrate on the higher level students. Like Pat, his instructors are now booked solid all year long.

More than fourteen years ago, Pat turned his focus from training horses to teaching people and has put a great deal of study into the development of his programs. Human nature makes us all want to start with, "Teach me to spin...to slide...to jump...do lead changes...to ride with collection. I don't want to do the basics, they're boring!"

Pat found that if he could teach people to become horsemen first and to have savvy in four basic areas: On Line, At Liberty, riding Freestyle and riding with Finesse...that they would be able to do anything they dreamed of with a horse.

What you will learn through Parelli are not the usual basics, but are some of the most advanced concepts in horse psychology and behavior around, as well as some of the most advanced techniques in working with horses both on the ground and on their backs. Pat's students achieve in just a few weeks what it takes most people a lifetime to master.
